Chapter 250: Remembering Sung Jin-Woo's Clones

The existence of Sung Jin-Woo’s clones was a testament to his unparalleled mastery of shadow magic and the boundless power of his Absolute Being status. While his eleven main clones operated in key domains, fulfilling vital roles across the multiverse, his creativity and strategic vision extended far beyond.

The Eleven Main Clones

Each of these clones carried 0.00000000001% of Sung Jin-Woo's original power—a minuscule fraction of his strength, yet enough to make them godlike entities in their own right.

1. First Clone:
Deployed to the Abyss, the realm of infinite darkness and chaos, the First Clone acted as a guardian and observer, ensuring no entity or force rose to challenge the balance of the multiverse.

2. Second Clone:
Sent to Earth, disguised as an S^{9}-Rank hunter, this clone maintained a connection with humanity, safeguarding the planet from any unforeseen threats and secretly guiding its evolution.

3. Third Clone:
Assigned to the Shadowverse, the domain of the Shadowkins, the Third Clone ensured the prosperity and growth of their civilization, mentoring their leaders and advancing their society.

4. Fourth Clone:
Tasked with governing the Shadow Abyss, the domain of the Shadow Lords, this clone oversaw the training and mobilization of these shadow soldiers, readying them for any potential multiversal threats.

5. Fifth Clone:
Deployed to the Sung Dynasty, this clone monitored the dynasty's internal affairs, ensuring its rulers remained just and its people prospered under divine protection.

6. Sixth Clone:
Sent to the domain of the Heavenly Soldiers, this clone coordinated their training and expansion, elevating their military might to unprecedented levels.

7. Seventh Clone:
Positioned within the domain of the Dark Apostles, this clone ensured order among these enigmatic beings, preventing any descent into chaos or rebellion.

8. Eighth Clone:
Stationed in the Gladiator's Arenas, the Eighth Clone actively participated in battles, honing his combat skills while observing the strengths and weaknesses of various species and warriors.

9. Ninth Clone:
Serving as the guardian of blessings at the Umbra Citadel, this clone was responsible for bestowing blessings upon Sung Jin-Woo’s followers, priests, and worshippers, ensuring their continued faith and growth.

10. Tenth Clone:
Sharing responsibilities with the Ninth Clone, the Tenth Clone alternated shifts, maintaining the seamless delivery of blessings and divine protection.

11. Eleventh Clone:
Deployed to the domain of the Apostles of God, this clone worked alongside these angelic beings, strengthening their resolve and guiding them in their divine duties.

The Legion of Inner-World Clones

Beyond these eleven primary clones, Sung Jin-Woo created 1,100,000 additional clones, each tasked with overseeing one of the 1,100,000 inner worlds contained within his body.

The Inner Worlds:

These inner worlds were vast and varied, each resembling a self-contained universe teeming with life, civilizations, and ecosystems.

The clones deployed to these worlds served as overseers, ensuring the harmony and balance of their assigned domains while reporting directly to Sung Jin-Woo.

Each clone acted as a god within their world, guiding its inhabitants and protecting it from external threats.

Purpose of the Inner Worlds:

Reservoirs of Power: These worlds acted as reservoirs of energy, continuously feeding Sung Jin-Woo's infinite strength.

Centers of Innovation: Many worlds served as experimental grounds for new creations, where Sung Jin-Woo could test ideas, develop advanced technologies, and train future warriors.

Multiversal Stability: By maintaining countless worlds within his body, Sung Jin-Woo ensured the multiverse’s stability, as these realms acted as buffers against potential cosmic disruptions.

The Legacy of Sung Jin-Woo’s Clones

The existence of these clones exemplified Sung Jin-Woo’s meticulous planning and infinite capacity as an Absolute Being. Each clone, whether stationed in the multiverse or within his inner worlds, played a critical role in maintaining the balance of existence and furthering his vision of eternal harmony and prosperity.

While the clones carried only a fraction of his power, their unity and coordination made them an extension of Sung Jin-Woo’s unparalleled might, ensuring that no force, no matter how great, could ever challenge the Absolute King.
